

The Strategy18 Conference

Threats to Sovereignty

in the 21st Century

Defining threats, trends, and options

From the ONLY research group specializing in sovereignty and identity aspects of security ...

A unique, vital conference for strategic and defense officials. Capitol Hill, Washington, DC: September 6, 2018.

with early registration, a working dinner, and talk on September 5, 2018.

◆ How will "sovereignty" be defined in the coming decades? ◆ Will societies increasingly have to combat threats on domestic as well as external fronts? ◆ How can governments cope with threats of secessionism, especially if fueled by external actors? ◆ Ramifications for intelligence services, domestic security, and defense forces. ◆ The role of Strategic Information Dominance (SID) and active cyber operations ◆ How much will border controls, bilateralization of trade, changing energy patterns, and the end of "globalization" impact societal cohesion and national security? ◆ How to measure and plan the impact on economies and defense planning ◆ Tendencies to return to traditional social and political identities ... And much more.

All delegates will receive a free copy of the extensive new study, Sovereignty in the 21st Century, by Gregory Copley, and a six-month free subscription to Defense & Foreign Affairs Strategic Policy monthly journal.
